The Reinventing Space Conference

Organised by the British Interplanetary Society, Reinventing Space is a conference and exhibition dedicated to advancing humanity's future capabilities in space and highlights the trends that will define space enterprise a decade from now. Each year, the conference brings together a network of innovators from industry, agency, government, financiers, academia and end users to present and discuss the key challenges and opportunities for future space leadership and growth.

The global economic climate is creating demand to reduce expenditure, and climate change requires urgent action from space to monitor the world's weather and resources, and contribute to energy solutions. These both lead to new challenges and opportunities in world space. Reinventing Space connects these critical topics with key emerging themes and people, both from within and outside the space sector. The conference is a second-to-none networking opportunity to meet the innovators and organisations vital for the future direction of space. Attendance at RISpace allows you to play an important role in discussing and seeding the ideas that will help to shape and accelerate the future outlook and ambitions of the global space sector.

2022 Conference – Programme Outline

The theme for the 19th Reinventing Space conference is:

Strategic Foundations for New Space

The Conference will focus on the 'building blocks' and critical pathways that will take us from where we are today, towards future improved utilisation of space. Topics covering both ground and space-based infrastructure as well as future space operations will be explored, linking humanity's longer-term aspirations for space and how these elements can be used for the benefit of life on Earth.

The 19th Reinventing Space conference and exhibition will be held at Aerospace Bristol on Monday 28 and Tuesday 29 November 2022

This year's conference runs across two consecutive days, with the option to attend either or both days. Each day will consist of a combination of talks from selected presenters as well as dedicated panel sessions and invited Keynote talks aligned with each day's theme:

Day 1 - Strategic Foundations - Monday 28 November

"Key enablers, emerging capabilities, technologies/systems, services and infrastructure that form the 'building blocks' for New Space."

Day 2 - Space Energy Applications - Tuesday 29 November

"Opportunities and challenges for providing and harnessing energy in space for in-space or terrestrial power applications."

Reinventing Space 2022 Comes to Bristol

Aerospace is recognised as a growth area for the UK economy. With its clear track record of exponential growth over the past decade and its obvious future potential, the UK Space Sector is set to lead the way. Small and innovative companies in the Bristol and South West region have been establishing a presence in the sector and demonstrating their own potential. The UK is a world leader in the satellite business, with strength in both large and small satellites. Several companies in Bristol and the South West region are already to the fore in providing space systems, components and Space and launch services.

RISpace 2022 will be run in the impressive Concorde Gallery of the Aerospace Bristol Museum. All talks and lectures will be in the Gallery's smart 150-200 seat auditorium while the exhibitor stalls will be in the Concorde hall alongside the pop-up cafe. An optional networking reception will be held on the Monday evening to allow conference delegates extra time to connect. A parallel Student/Careers Day will also take place on the Tuesday run by the BIS NextGen Network and UKSEDS, to support our future generation.

The conference will conclude on the Tuesday, with the Gala Dinner in the evening (optional), including the 2021 Sir Arthur Clarke Awards. This prestigious awards ceremony recognises and rewards teams and individuals who have made significant achievements in, and contributions to, all space activities in 2021. Don't miss this special opportunity to dine under the wings of Concorde.

Aerospace Bristol tells the incredible story of Bristol's amazing aviation achievements. The highlight of the museum is surely the iconic Concorde, with the chance to step aboard the last of the supersonic jets ever to fly. See inside the world's fastest passenger jet, glimpse into the cockpit, and walk through the passenger cabin to discover how Concorde passengers would travel in style. There's loads to discover at Aerospace Bristol, starting from the earliest days of powered flight, through to today's cutting-edge aerospace technologies. There are aeroplanes, helicopters, missiles, satellites, rockets, engines and more to see and many of the exhibits are interactive.

Reinventing Space – The Mission

The annual RISpace conference began in Los Angeles in 2003 to look at 'responsive space'. This originally focused on the US military needs in adapting space capabilities to the rapidly changing national security requirements. As the conference has developed it has refocused on all aspects of low-cost access and utilisation of space – from launchers to CubeSats; from improved optics for Earth Observation to ion drives for long-distance propulsion.

Advances in technology continues to drive the international space effort in civil, military and commercial space. RISpace sessions and panels look at finding ways to work together to make things happen and involve a broad cross-section of experts from the space community to advise and challenge the topics brought into focus at every conference.

Attendees, authors and keynotes come from many different spheres:

- Decision-makers from space agencies and national space programmes
- Space innovators and visionaries
- CEOs and leading executives
- Government, law and regulatory representatives
- Students and young professionals
- Engineers and scientists from cutting-edge companies
- Academics from all space disciplines
- Space financiers, entrepreneurs, seed funders and crowdfunders
- Satellite owners and satellite operators
- Commercial and New Space industry representatives
- Leaders from military and civilian space
- Members of the general public with an interest in the future direction of space

Organised by the British Interplanetary Society

The British Interplanetary Society, as the world's oldest space advocacy organisation, continues to promote the exploration and use of space for the benefit of humanity, by connecting people to create, educate and inspire and advance knowledge in all aspects of astronautics. It initiates and disseminates new concepts and technical information about space flight and astronautics.

Proceeds from the Reinventing Space conference and exhibition will enable the Society to carry out this mission to bring the space sector closer together to advance knowledge and engage in new initiatives across an international space community.
